Dear ExtensisHR hiring team,

I am applying for the Project Manager role at ExtensisHR. I spent eight years in agency account leadership, where the work centered on project plans, budgets, timelines, status reporting, vendors, approvals, and cross-functional delivery. Since then, I have led enterprise product work and built technology workflows that make complex decisions easier to manage. I am interested in bringing that background into a dedicated PMO role.

At FCB Health, I was one of two consumer account leads on the agency's largest pharmaceutical business and managed the $20M Namenda XR direct-to-consumer launch. I also owned the broadcast workstream for three national television commercials in one year, coordinating research, regulatory review, production, talent and location logistics, and network clearances. Earlier, on the $10M NUVIGIL consumer business, I owned weekly client status and financial reporting, multichannel delivery, review-committee submissions, and annual strategic recommendations.

At Kinesso, I helped grow a distributed product design team from 2 to 30 while planning staffing, scope, resources, quality reviews, and engineering handoff across more than 20 products. I built the company's first UX research practice with checkpoints in project plans, led workshops on product discovery and ecosystem mapping, and presented recommendations to executives and clients. I also helped turn a digital audit method into a repeatable workflow with benchmarks, recommendations, and client-ready reporting.

My current work sits between business needs and implementation. At Hedgehox, I built a Scope Generator for agency finance and operations teams and helped turn brief intake, review routing, submission capture, and regulatory monitoring into working tools. Through One Block Away, I lead discovery, define the problem, build a testable POC, gather feedback, and turn the result into a clear next decision. AI is part of that work, but the point is always a better process and a useful handoff.

My titles have spanned account leadership, UX, product strategy, and implementation. The common thread is giving complicated work enough structure to move: clarify the objective, make the plan visible, keep stakeholders aligned, surface risks early, and close the loop. I would welcome a conversation about bringing that approach to ExtensisHR's PMO.

Sincerely,

Wally Mostafa
