Dear Bubble hiring team,

I am applying for the Director, Product Design role at Bubble. My background spans product design, UX research, design systems, client strategy, and hands-on AI product delivery. The common thread is making complex tools easier to understand, use, and improve.

At Kinesso, I joined product design as the second hire and later served as Director, Experience & Innovation. I helped scale the function from 2 to 30 people across the United States and Poland while supporting enterprise products used by 7,000+ people across 22 brands. I also built a UX research discipline across more than 20 products so teams had a repeatable way to interview users, test prototypes, share findings, and bring feedback into product decisions.

Design systems were another major part of that work. I led UX and system strategy for analytics, dashboard building, brand theming, reusable components, navigation, and personalization. The portfolio shows how research changed product behavior, how shared standards helped design and development work together, and how the system stayed useful as the suite and team grew.

My current work brings that foundation into AI products. I lead discovery, product strategy, UX, AI workflow design, front-end and backend decisions, demo readiness, and client iteration through working prototypes. That hands-on loop has made me especially interested in Bubble's challenge: giving people the speed of AI while preserving enough structure and control to build something real.

My route into product design is less conventional than a 10-year design-only title sequence. The direct record is nearly eight years in UX, product design, and experience leadership, supported by earlier digital client work and 15 years across complex delivery. It also does not document formal ownership of team recruiting or a five-year coaching record. What I can show is the work of building a design function, creating research and system practices, setting standards, and staying close to users and delivery.

Bubble needs a leader who can make a powerful platform feel learnable without flattening what it can do. I would welcome the chance to talk about the team, the product vision, and where my experience could be useful.

Sincerely,

Wally Mostafa
